

ACADEMIC PROGRESS STANDARDS

Students receiving financial aid through federal or Muhlenberg funds (including Stafford and PLUS loans) must remain in good standing and make satisfactory academic progress to retain their awards.

Good standing is defined as the minimum academic standards required for continued enrollment in a degree program.

Satisfactory academic progress is defined as the minimal cumulative GPA and the attempted and earned course units required to retain financial aid. These progress standards are different from those used to compose the financial aid renewal award packages. The academic progress of every financial aid recipient is reviewed each semester after the freshman year to make sure these standards are being met.

See the Academic Policies and the Financial Aid sections of the Muhlenberg College Catalog for further information.
